FOREWORD

Sri Venkateswara Suprabhatam along with Stotram, Prapathi and Mangala sasanam constitutes the morning prayer recited daily in the early hours in the sacred temple of Lord Venkateswara. This sublime, soul-inspiring panegyric on Lord Venkateswara is remarkable for its sweetness, subtlety of expression and devotional appeal. Composed by Prativadi Bhayankaran Anna, a contemporary of Sri Vedanta Desika, the Suprabhatam has become so much a part of our religious life that mere listening to its recital brings to our minds the beatific, ever blissful image of Lord Venkateswara.

The first verse viz., the Suprabhatam is addressed to the Lord beseeching Him to wake up as the day has dawned and the daily ablutions and rituals are to be performed. In the next part, the stotram, the devotee submits himself to Srinivasa, seeking His benevolence. It concludes with an appeal for enlightenment, for forgiveness and for acceptance of worship. In third part, the poet upholds the uniqueness of prapatti and vouchsafes speedy fulfilment of prayers of those who surrendered at His lotus feet. ‘Mangala sasanam’, the last part, is an offering of salutations and felicitations to Lord Srinivasa describing His unblemished glories.

The present rendering of this exquisite hymn by Sri B.V.L. Narayanarow is mainly intended for English-knowing readers. His lucid translation and scholarly introduction enable the readers to enjoy the beauty and spiritual significance of this quartet of hymns.

It is fervently hoped that this translation of Sri Venkateswara Suprabhatam will help the readers to experience the poetic excellence and spiritual ecstasy of the original composition.

INTRODUCTION

People all over the world pray, obviously because they believe there is someone who listens and acts. The ardent devotee believes that prayer connects the human and the divine. It establishes a relationship, even kinship with that kingship. It initiates a process by which the human is turned into the divine. Matter turns into spirit.

As he stands before the Lord, the devotee connects himself to a power-centre. That current of divine grace enters into him provided his system has no impurities. The condition of the three-fold purity of thought, word and deed has to be met. What is false cannot accept what is true. Truth can be housed only in what is true. A broken vow, for instance, is a violation of the principle of triple-purity and acts as a barrier to the flow of divine grace.

Who prays of what?

According to the Bhagavad Gita, there are four types of the blessed who pray. First, the man in anguish who finds every other agency he has turned to has failed him and there is no one else to turn to. Second, the seeker who wants to know God, himself and the world. Third, the seeker of wealth. Finally, the sage who knows (B.G.7.16) All the four of them turn to God, each with a different intention.

It is not only the mere mortals but even the heavenly beings pray to make the Lord assume an appropriate form every time to protect the good and punish the wicked. Interestingly, Rama and Krishna, incarnations as they are, also pray whenever they undertake to do great deeds.

Thus, from Avatara Purushas to orphans, from Mahatmas to godmen, from kings to commoners, from priests to politicians, from oppressed nations to harassed women, everyone finds it necessary to pray. They seek one thing or the other, make resolutions, promises and pledges, soliciting divine sympathy and support.

What is a proper mode of prayer?

Whatever the mode of prayer, it is all worship. It is meditation and affirmation. It is a process of purification. It is an attempt to improve one's concentration to enable the mind turn godward. It is an admission of one's own limitations and an acknowledgment of the power of a superior force. It is a display of humility. It is devotion. It is considered an easy path for the emancipation of the self and it is highly recommended by scholars and saints alike.

It is readily seen when the devotee listens to the story of the Lord, sings it, repeats the Lord's name, adores His feet, worships Him, salutes Him, serves Him, is friendly, or dedicates himself.

These nine, enumerated by that great devotee Prahlada in Srimad Bhagavatam (7.5.23) are equally effective ways of prayer since in all these states, the devotee's thoughts, words and deeds are totally God-oriented.

How is language related to prayer? .

Prayer uses language. If prayer is a miracle, language is yet another miracle. Human beings communicate with each other using language. Although it is claimed that language as we know it is used only by the humans, it ceases to be a miracle if it is so restricted. Only because it is a miracle, human beings use it to communicate with the divine.

Our scriptures, folk-tales and personal experiences of many great persons confirm that inter-species as well as intra-species communication through language is possible. When we bless or curse people, there is an implicit belief that language has that miraculous power to make our wish materialize and that our mere saying it is enough for the job to be done.

Why pray early in the morning?

An early morning prayer indirectly tells us that it is not a once-in-a-way activity but should become an everyday exercise. Also, a person can concentrate better early in the morning. The day gets sanctified and assures the devotee that the rest of the day will go off well since it began with a good session of prayer. Later in the day, the daily chores are likely to be very distracting, making it difficult for the person to concentrate.

The prayer protects the individual from sliding into unsocial, sinful activity during the rest of the day. It reminds him of the need to be unselfish, and of his social responsibility thus awakening his conscience. He becomes a model and an example to others, too.

Where is the Suprabhatam recited?

The Suprabhatam is recited every morning in the famous temple of Sri Venkateswara at the pilgrim town of Tirupati in Andhra Pradesh, and many other temples of Sri Venkateswara in India and other countries.

It is recited by devotess in many Indian homes. It is broadcast over All India Radio in its morning devotionals.

The main temple is located at Tirumala, uphill from Tirupati and attracts thousands of pilgrims daily. They come by rail, road and air.

The Lord is also known as Balaji, Govinda, Srinivasa and Venkatesa. Pilgrims worship the Lord in various ways. They donate money, attend various daily pujas, roll around the temple to fulfil a vow, get their heads tonsured, and even perform the wedding of the Lord sometimes to redeem their pledges.

However, they prefer most to attend the early morning prayer session where the temple priests awaken the Lord chanting sonorously these slokas in Sanskrit.

How is the Suprabhatam organized?

The Suprabhatam is in for sections.

| | | Verses |
|-------------|-----------------------|--------|
| Section - 1 | Early morning prayer | 1-29 |
| Section - 2 | In praise of the Lord | 1-11 |
| Section - 3 | Supplication | 1-16 |
| Section - 4 | Benediction | 1-14 |

What is the theme of the Suprabhatam?

There are several themes and sub-themes in the text of Suprabhatam. It is reflective of the individual as well as the collective beliefs of the devotees.

It describes the Lord as the Formless Absolute Reality as well as the Formful, spectacular, benign, favorite, personal God. The devotee can choose whichever form he is comfortable with to meditate on the Supreme.

The first section is named Suprabhatam. But the entire prayer is known as Suprabhatam, too. It considers the Lord as King-emperor with all the royal prerogatives and privileges of the Ruler.

In fact, it equates Sri Venkatesa with the incarnation of Rama. The very first verse is from Valmiki's Ramayana wherein Sage Viswamitra awakens the young Rama, urges Him to be worthy of his parentage, announces the day-break and instructs Him to perform His daily spiritual routine. (1.1.)

Thus, Sri Venkatesa is seen as a variant and continuation of Rama, that is of Vishnu, and is not exempt from going through the daily spiritual exercises which He has to go through. The King as Guardian has to be active, free from sloth.

Since the Ramayana is entitled to the same respect as the Vedas, the Suprabhatam as an elaboration of a single sloka, awakens the Supreme here on earth, and is entitled to the same respect as the Ramayana.

Incidentally, Viswamitra establishes the Suprabhatam convention, of awakening the Lord in the morning.

Along with the Lord, His inseparable companion, His spouse Lakshmi is also urged to get up and assist the Lord in performing His duties.

The forms of the Lord and His spouse are described in great detail (1.3,4,13,23). They show the high degree of concentration the composer has and lead the devotee chanting these verses to focus on those forms and meditate. Such meditation eventually leads to his emancipation. *

Early in the morning the other gods, the sages such as Narada, the priests, the saints and the yogis come to awaken the Lord and wait patiently for His darshan (1.5,6,9,14,16,25,27). His appointees then proceed to perform the duties He assigned them (1.17).

Every one is subordinate to Him and derives his power only through His power and authority and exercises it with His consent (1.18,19).

The Lord's devotee is considered superior in rank to the highest of the celestial rulers. (1.18) The Lord left Vaikuntha and made the hills of Tirupati His abode.

All heavenly glory is now in Tirupati so much so those proceeding to heaven change their mind, attracted by the location and the presence of Sri Venkatesa, decide to remain close to the Lord of Tirupati making the earth their new home. They worry that his eon may soon end. (1.19,20)

He is the Creator of this Creation. The parrots and the bees greet him musically (1.8,10). The living and the non-living are loyal to the Lord, glad that they could serve Him and adore His spectacular Form.

He excels Cupid (1.23). He loves His spouse dearly. He is fault-free (1.24). He assumed the ten incarnations (1.24).

The birds, the beasts, the insects and every living being admit his suzerainty. He helps His devotees escape the cycle of births and deaths. The Upanishads proclaim His glory (1.28).

He fulfills every wish of his devotees. The recitation of these verses is fruitful -- the devotee is guaranteed self-realization (1.29).

The second section is in praise of the Lord and prays for His success. He is seen as a great romantic with Lakshmi for His permanent bosom companion. He is, therefore, the same as Vishnu (2.1).

No other god is a match to Him (2.9). The devotee can count on His compassion. He knows no other god (2.8,9). He is Krishna who drew the milkmaids to him through his melodious music on the flute (2.5). He is Rama, the best of the Raghu clan and conqueror of Ravana, too. Sita cherishes His company (2.6).

The devotee praises His Form, His friendly nature, His very supportive brothers, and His skill in archery. And assures Him of his total devotion to Him (2.8).

The devotee bargains with Sri Venkatesa to give him the rewards of daily worship though he made the pilgrimage to Tirupati only once. Quickly, he realizes his error and begs for forgiveness for all his misdeeds (2.10,11).

The third section is supplication. It is surrender, total and irreversible. The devotee is engulfed by his worldly preoccupations. There are several factors, internal and external, that are inimical to his spiritual development. He needs to be rescued. He falls at the feet of the Lord and His spouse. The Lord's soles have distinctive features to confirm He is Vishnu (3.1,5).

His Feet are so sensitive that even the tender hand of His spouse hurts Him when she massages them. They confirm their description in the scriptures that they ooze honey. Scriptural testimony is indeed trustworthy (3.7,10).

It is impertinent to compare His Feet to lotuses because they are more tender. The glow of the Lord's Toe-nails outshines the moon (3.6)

Great gods fall at His Feet (3.9).

The very same Feet of the Lord the devotee carries on his head, and across time Sri Venkatesa's Feet were the same as Krishna's. This reiterates the findings of the Upanishads (3.11,12).

The Lord's Feet, like a mother's bosom, provide easy access and food-security to the child and help overcome the fear of death. They reassert that Sri Venkatesa is indeed Krishna, that is, Vishnu (3.14,12).

The Hand of Krishna pointed His feet to Arjuna asking him to surrender himself to the Lord. It continues now, as the Hand of Sri Venkatesa, to communicate the same message to the devotee (3.11).

This is to tell us that total surrender to the Lord for self-realization is valid at all times and that Sri Venkatesa is the same as Sri Krishna, the incarnation of Vishnu.

The composer shows enormous respect for his Guru and without the Guru's blessings, nothing could be understood. The Guru could save his disciples from falling into the ocean of birth and death.

Such a great Guru recommended falling at the Lord's Feet to establish an unbreakable relationship that guaranteed salvation in the end (3.15).

The Lord is inseparable from His Spouse and She is as powerful as He is (3.16).

The fourth section is benediction, a ceremonial prayer seeking divine protection to the divine. The fear that something can go wrong makes the author invoke divine intervention. The evil-eye of someone may do damage even to the Lord because He is embodied. Again the devotee feels that by seeking the help of the heavenly forces, he can ward off the possible ill-effects of such evil eyes. Furthermore, there is the belief that there are the 'tathaa astu' celestials who keep saying 'may it be so' to every uttered wish.

As the Spouse of Lakshmi, the affluent Sri Venkatesa is the rescuer of the needy. His abode is well-known and the devotee can approach Him. He is the Eye of all the worlds (4.1,2).

His beautiful Form is enrapturing (4.34).

He is Formless, too. And in that mode, Sri Venkatesa is eternal, absolutely perfect, true, happy, omniscient and omnipotent (4.5).

Sri Venkatesa is the soul, the inner spirit of every being. He is the Supreme; He is Brahman. He has no wishes of His own which need fulfillment. Devotees find Him so attractive that they want to remain in His presence all the time (4.6,7,8).

Just in case the devotee forgets himself in Sri Venkatesa's presence, there is the Lord's Hand showing him the Lord's Feet. Sri Venkatesa is prompting the devotee to give up and then turn godward (4.9).

The Lord's compassionate look sprinkles the universe, providing relief (4.10).

Vishnu, weary of Vaikuntha, moved over to Tirumala and is enjoying water-sports with His Spouse here in the Lord's pool (4.12).

May Sri Venkatesa, present everywhere, and who, more so is constantly in the thoughts of Saint Manavala, always succeed, is the prayer of the author (4.13).

Here, the composer ends the Suprabhatam by invoking divine blessings for his teacher and the many predecessor generations of teachers engaged in teaching self-realization to the devotees. The belief here is that great truths reveal themselves to a genuine devotee only with the help of a competent spiritual instructor (4.14).

Thus, the Suprabhatam is an attempt to awaken the Lord from His yoganidra, transcendental sleep. Reciting is bound to reduce and finally eliminate a person's ahamkara, egotism. It is said that ahamkara tends to make mountains of other people's mistakes and mole-hills of our own. The Suprabhatam initiates a process to turn matter into spirit. It makes the devotee ecologically aware of the beautiful world around him and how even gods are appreciative of it. It shows the importance of faith, the miraculous power of language to communicate, and the importance of everyday exercise for spiritual, mental and physical health. It shows the importance of the Guru who alone can show God. It is an aid to self-purification. That is a great reward.

My translation greatly profited from the suggestions made by Mahamahopadhyaya Pullela Sriramachandrudu, Sri Yellam-

Sri Venkateswara Suprabhatam

raju Srinivasa Rao, Sri C. Ramabrahmam, Sri Kamisetty Srinivasulu and Sri Vakati Panduranga Rao, Sri B. Srinivas Rao and Smt. Vaagdevi. I found the Oxford Book of Prayer and the write-ups of spiritual discourses published daily in The Hindu instructive.. The shortcomings that remain are entirely mine.

I am grateful to Dr. I.V. Subba Rao, I.A.S., Executive Officer, TTD and the Publication Committee, TTD, for agreeing to publish this translation to enable the English knowing public all over the world appreciate the text and the tradition of Sri Venkateswara Suprabhatam.

EARLY MORNING PRAYER

Arise, Rama!

Precious child of the noble Kausalya
It's twilight in the East
Wake up, Rama,
The best among men!
You should perform
your morning ritual!

1

Get up, Govinda

Get up, Govinda, get up,
Lord of the eagle banner!
Get up, the Spouse of Lakshmi Bestow the auspicious on all the three worlds.

2

Arise, Lakshmi

Mother of all the worlds,
Resident of Vishnu's Bosom
Enchanting celestial Form
Bright Chief,
Benefactor of those seeking
Your protection!
Spouse of Lord Venkatesa
Good morning!

Good morning,
Lotus-eyed Goddess with a benevolent, bright Face
like the moonlight,
You are worshipped by the spouses
of Brahma, Sankara and Indra, Spouse of the Lord of the Vrisha Hill, Ocean of Compassion!

4

The seven sages

Atri and the rest of the seven sages who sought Your refuge completed their twilight prayers, brought the lovely lotuses from the celestial cascade to worship at Your Feet!
Lord of the summit of Seshadri,
Good morning to You!

The pots compete with the quarters

The milkmaids churn the curd-pots in their homes.

The echo and the re-echo sound like an altercation between the quarters and the pots.

Lord of the summit of Seshadri,
Good morning to You!

11

The bees compete with the drums

The clusters of bees resting in the sun-friendly lotuses with a hundred petals as if to drive out the gleam ensuing from the dark flowers with their own light, hum furiously
like they are beating the wardrums

Lord of the summit of Seshadri,

Śrī Venkaṭeśa Stotram
IN PRAISE OF THE LORD

Prayer for Your triumph

The red powder on the nipples of Your spouse's bosom is now smeared on Your dark Body.

God of wide eyes,
Ruler of all the worlds,
Lord of the hill of Venkatasaila,
May You always be victorious!

Your superiority

You are superior to all the important gods
such as the four-faced Brahma, the five-faced Siva, and the six-faced Kumarasvami!

You protect affectionately those seeking Your refuge!

You are the Abode of Strength!
Save me, the Lord of Vrishasaila!

Save me, quick

I am full of many misdeeds committed all the time, intolerably and without limit.

Please save me, quickly, with utmost compassion

3 adhiveṇkaṭaśailam udāramaterjanatābhimatādhika dānaratāt, kamalādayitān na param kalaye.

4

śatakoṭi vṛtāt smarakoṭisaināt, prati vallavikābhimatāt sukhadāt vasudeva sutān na param kalaye.

5 abhirāma guṇākara! dāśarathe!

jagadeka dhanurdhara! dhīramate!
raghunāyaka! rāma! rameśa! vibho!
varado bhava! deva! dayā jaladhe!

6

There's no other God

Residing on the Venkatasaila
He loves to give generously More than the people ask for.
He has been proclaimed
the Supreme by the Vedas.
I know of no other God
than Him. The Spouse of Lakshmi, the Goddess of wealth.

4

Magic melody God

Thousands of milkmaids, overwhelmed by the magic melody of His flute, surround Him who is more beautiful than a million Cupids.
He is the Darling of every milkmaid.
I know of no other God
than Sri Krishna, son of Vasudeva.

5

Bestower of boons

Rama, Home of enchanting qualities!
Son of the king Dasaratha!
The finest archer in the world!
The Brave! The most famous of the Raghu clan!
The spouse of Lakshmi!
The All-pervasive!
The Ocean of compassion! Divinity!
Please bestow on us Your boons!

6

Rama, the Great Soul

Sita, the daughter of the earth loves to hold His hand.

His face is pleasing like the moon and lovely like the lotus.

He conquered Ravana, the king of Demons like the sun dispels darkness.

I want to attain that Rama,
the great soul of the Raghu clan.

7

Rama, the Favourite

He is lovely faced, friendly, easily accessible, joy-giving,
blessed with good brothers, well-built, and user of arrows that never miss their target.

Giving up the God of the Raghu clan,
I will never ever worship another God.

8

Very special

There is no other Master,
none whatsoever,
except Venkatesvara.

I will think of my Lord Venkatesa again and again
Hari! Venkatesa! Show me
Your beneficence!

Give me, again and again
what is good.

* * *

A little favour

I came from far away to worship Your lotus-feet.

Please give me the fruits of daily worship
though this is a onetime worship
Lord Venkatesa!

10

Apology

I am ignorant, please forgive me again and yet again,
the many mistakes I made,
the Crest-jewel of the Seshasaila!

SUPPLICATION

Controller

Mother, You are the Controller
Of this universe,
The Supreme Lover of Vishnu.
You delight in being His Bosom Companion
And make Him more tolerant always,
Your two tender hands gracefully hold lotuses.
Seated in the lotus, Lakshmi,
You show fine qualities such as affection, and so on gloriously, I salute You, Mother!

1

Wish-fulfilling Lord

The Ocean of compassion!
The Creator of all the worlds!
Auspicious Lord!
The Omniscient!
The most Competent!
The Protector of the devotees!
You are Sarvaseshin,
The Whole where everything rests!
The Master, the Good!
The most easily accessible God
The Parijata tree making the wishes of the devotees materialise,
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

Your Feet

Your Feet are embedded in flowers, ankle-deep, bettering the fragrance of the blossomed flowers, well-set, benevolent, perceived and yet to be more perceived always.
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

3

Our insolence

Your fresh, fragrant, deep-red, incomparable Feet,
make us write in insolent words that they are just like lotuses
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your feet!

4

Designs

The soles of Your Feet have lines specifying the staff, the kalasa of nectar,
the umbrella, the diamond, the goad,
the lotus, the magical kalpavriksha, the conch and the discus—
all signs of the Supreme.
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

5

Outshining Feet

The soles of Your Feet
outshine the redstone
the shins of Your Legs outshine the sapphires
the glitter of Your Nails shoots up, driving the moon beams away.
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

Sensitive Feet

When Lakshmi
with fondness and fear
massages Your Feet
with Her tender hands,
You find it hurts
Your Feet are so lovely and delicate that no thought and words can describe them well
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your feet!

7

Added redness

Sri Devi, Bhu Devi,
the equally great Nila and the rest of the heavenly queens with their slender hands
massage Your Feet
They add on the redness of their hands to Your Feet making Them look, indeed, more red than they are Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

8

Offering of lights

Everyday when Brahma, Siva and the rest of the heavenly gods bow their heads reverently, the sparkle cast by the nine gems studded in their crowns, looks like an offering of light to Your Feet.
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at your feet!

Scriptural testimony

The scriptures proclaim Your Feet the most supreme, that honey that can be relished oozes from Them.

Again, Your downward Palm indicates that it is indeed so, directing us to Your Feet.

Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

10

Arjuna, the devotee

As the driver of his chariot
You were as good as Arjuna.
You showed him Your Feet advising him to surrender himself to You totally.

Again, here and now,
the same Hand is directing me to the same Feet.

Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

11

Same Footprints

Your Feet grace my head,
the hood of the serpent Kaliya,
dense jungles, the peak of Sri Venkatadri, the Upanishads, and the thoughts of singleminded yogis, equally.

Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

Beautifying Feet

Your Feet have flowers strewn on the earth unfading, and always blooming.
They beautify, indeed
the peak of Sri Venkatadri.
They please the eyes and the minds of all the people.
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

13

Incomparable Feet

Generally, your devotees' looks fall on Your Feet first, when they bend before You
They are ambrosial like the mother's breast sustains the life of her child.
Your Feet can be compared only to each other and to nothing else.
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

14

The spiritual guide

My Guru's feet were worshipped by the saintly, always.
He could help people cross
the birth-and-death cycle, with compassion in his eyes.
He showed me Your Feet.
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

Dedication

Laksmi's Master! When you are
The means to salvation,
She is the means, too.
When You are the goal,
She is the Goal, too.
You are inseparable from Her
And without a blemish.
I am in Your service, and never my own,
Lord of Vrishagiri
Sri Venkatesa! I fall at Your Feet!

Śrī Veṅkaṭésa Maṅgalāśāsanam BENEDICTION

Heralding

For the spouse of Lakshmi, who is the Abode of all that is auspicious,
the Treasury for the needy,
the Resident of Sri Venkatachala, Lord Srinivasa,
May it always be glorious!

1

The Eye

For Venkatesa who looks at Lakshmi with surprise writ large on His lovely Brows,
For the Eye of all the worlds,
May it always be glorious!

2

Blessed Abode

For Srinivasa whose Feet adorn and bless the peak of Venkatadri,
For the Abode
of all that is auspicious
May it always be glorious!

3

Enchanting

For Venkatesa, who is beautiful in every limb, who enchants with His beauty
all the living, all the time,
May it always be glorious!

9

Indweller

For Venkatesa, who is eternal,
Without a blemish,
For Sat, Cit and Ananda
Existence, Consciousness and Bliss,
For the Indweller of every being
May it always be glorious!

5

Omniscient

For Venkatesa, who is Omniscient, the Omnipotent,
For Sarvaseshin.
the Whole where everything rests
May it always be glorious!

6

The Supreme

For Venkatesa, who is the Supreme,
Who has all His desires fulfilled,
for the Self, the Essence Beyond,
May it always be glorious!

7

The Ambrosia

For Venkatesa, whom people behold unaware of time and all the time,
For the Ambrosia such people want more and more,
May it always be glorious!

8

Indicator

For Venkatesa who with His Hand
Frequently and compassionately points to His Own Feet
as the Goal to people
May it always be glorious!

Cool Sprinkler

For Venkatesa who sprinkles the universe with His soothing look like the cool waves of a cascade of compassion
May it always be glorious!

10

Remover of difficulty

For Venkatesa whose Body adds lustre to His garlands, jewels, costumes, and weapons and who removes all difficulties,
May it always be glorious!

11

Earth better

For Venkatesa who is fed up with Vaikuntha, and has come to be near the bank of the pond,
and is sporting with His consort,
May it always be glorious!

12

Dweller of all the worlds

For Srinivasa who dwells in all the worlds, and is present in the thoughts of Saint Manavala
all the time,
May it always be glorious!
